CONTEST FOR THE DESIGN OF A LOGO/VISUAL DISTINCTIVE

II Inter-American Meeting of Ministers and High Level Authorities on Sustainable Development

“Because our youth is not the future, is our present.” – Ingo Marowsky

To promote youth participation in the hemisphere, as well as the theme of the Second Ministerial Meeting on Sustainable Development, and public participation as a priority and a cross-cutting issue to its working areas, the Department of Sustainable Development (DSD) is inviting all interested youth students of architecture, graphic design, art, marketing or related areas and nationals of an OAS Member State, to participate in the design of a logo/visual distinctive for the Second Inter-American

Meeting of Ministers and High Level Authorities on Sustainable Development.

The objective of the contest is to promote the participation and creativity of young students by participating in the design of a logo/visual distinctive for the Second Ministerial Meeting on Sustainable Development, creating awareness and knowledge about the ministerial theme “Towards Sustainable Development in the Americas.”

Organization of
American States

2010

The OAS is the oldest international organization in the region and the main forum for multilateral dialogue and concerted actions, bringing together the countries of the Western Hemisphere to strengthen regional cooperation and look after common interests. Through its Department of Sustainable Development (DSD), the OAS promotes the implementation of policies, projects and alliances for environmental protection to reach socio-economic development goals raised by its Member States, who have requested the DSD to support this call and the preparatory process for the “Second Inter-American Meeting of Ministers and High Level Authorities on Sustainable Development” that will examine the following theme: climate change and risk management.
