Mapping of work areas of co-operation between CITEL and TIA

- 1 TIA and CITEL plan to cooperate on a conference that would include participation of the ITU and potentially other regional (or sub-regional) telecommunications organizations, as well as the private sector from the region. The goal of the conference is to enhance regional coordination of policy and regulatory initiatives in order to create an environment conducive to promoting private investment and competition that will lead to network modernization and infrastructure deployment.
- 2 TIA, as an ANSI and an ITU-T accredited Standards Development Organization, recognizes the importance of telecommunications) standards development on a global level and especially within the Americas' region. In as such, TIA and CITEL plan to cooperate on matters of telecommunication standardization to enhance regional and global coordination and harmonization of technical standardization issues and specifications to facilitate network interconnectivity, interoperability, network modernization and infrastructure deployment.

Primary areas of cooperation would include activities involving CITEL PCC.I, Public Telecommunications Services and PCC.III, Radiocommunications. TIA, with at least eleven engineering committees and over 70 engineering subcommittees, produces a wide array of technical documents and standards. Areas of cooperation between CITEL and TIA may encompass work within the aforementioned committees or other areas of mutual interest that may arise due to technological development and changing technological trends and priorities. For more comprehensive identification and understanding, below are (1) examples of work areas that TIA has been and is actively involved; and (2) informational references regarding TIA's standard-related activities, engineering committees, etc.

Examples of TIA standardization activity include:

- Mobile and fixed communications that pertain to terrestrial and satellite systems
- 2. User premises telephone equipment and requirements
- 3. Fiber optic systems and equipment
- Voice and data transmission equipment, interfaces and systems (i.e., modems and facsimile)

- General areas of import to today's technological environment that include multimedia and broadband, Internet protocol technology and advanced wireless networks, services and terminals.
- 6. Global and future generation systems and networks.
