

Association Agreement Between the European Union and Chile

Article 28

Cooperation on the environment

1. The aim of cooperation will be to encourage conservation and improvement of the environment, prevention of contamination and degradation of natural resources and ecosystems, and rational use of the latter in the interests of sustainable development.
2. In this connection, the following are particularly significant:
 - (a) the relationship between poverty and the environment;
 - (b) the environmental impact of economic activities;
 - (c) environmental problems and land-use management;
 - (d) projects to reinforce Chile's environmental structures and policies;
 - (e) exchanges of information, technology and experience in areas including environmental standards and models, training and education;
 - (f) environmental education and training to involve citizens more; and
 - (g) technical assistance and joint regional research programmes.