

On 29, 30, and 31 March 2021, ITEN partner Cruzada Patagónica Foundation used an ITEN Seed Grant to host a National Virtual Seminar "Sowing STEAM-H" along with their collaborators from the Foundation for Education and Development for Rural Areas and its People (FEDIAP).

This virtual seminar was directed toward introducing teachers to STEAM (with a humanities focus) at approximately a dozen agro-fishery-technical schools located in rural western Argentina.

These teachers encounter significant challenges compared to other more traditional schools, including lack of consistent internet connectivity and lack of access to teacher professional development opportunities.

150+ teachers from across rural Argentina participated.

12 schools were represented.

However, these teachers often also have significant assets that can be a major benefit to incorporating STEAM in an authentic way. Many teachers have practical experience and access to farms and specialized annexes. These teachers often have opportunities to connect real, community-based contexts with problem-based learning, and are able to maintain extended contact with students who live on campus and/or attend on non-typical school schedules.

Escuela de Educación de la Universidad de San Andrés
- Lic. Mariano Ávalos (U.T.N. Bs. As.)
- Lic. María Eugenia Bertosi (Fundación Cruzada Patagónica)

This seminar included the following components:

- An introduction to STEAM, considering new ways of thinking, working, living, and the tools to do so
- Sharing of various STEAM initiatives at participating rural schools
- Coffee hours for informal networking
- Trainings on innovation in school reform
- Trainings on formative evaluation

This seminar is just the beginning of this STEAM-H initiative in Argentina's rural schools. Starting in April, participating teachers will be able to access a new digital platform with micro-courses that take teachers more in-depth with the topics introduced in the seminar. Teachers will earn digital badges for completing additional trainings, and will have opportunities to maintain connection with teachers across the country.
