ABOUT THE PARTNER INSTITUTIONS

The General Secretariat of the OAS (GS/OAS) is the central and permanent organ of the Organization of American States (OAS). Through its Department of Human Development, Education and Employment (DHDEE), the GS/OAS supports Member States in creating policies and implementing programs that promote the development of human capabilities at all educational levels. By enabling educational opportunities for citizens, DHDEE strengthens democratic values and security within the framework of regional integration. DHDEE does this by: (i) supporting the efforts of OAS member states to improve quality and equity in education; and (ii) helping the citizens of the Americas to develop their full potential by providing them with access to knowledge and skills through training that improves the living standards of individuals, families and communities in the region.

The New School, since its founding in 1919, has redrawn and redefined the boundaries of intellectual and creative thought as a preeminent academic center. Our rigorous, multidimensional approach to education dissolves walls between disciplines and helps nurture progressive minds. At our university, students have the academic freedom to shape their unique, individual paths for a complex and rapidly changing world. With leading-edge faculty and world-renowned alumni, we are committed to developing students who will have an impact on the world and address the most pressing social issues of our time.

ACHIEVEMENT AND INITIATIVES

The Julien J. Studley Graduate Programs in International Affairs (SGPIA) offers education and masters of arts and masters of science degrees that prepare students for careers in international affairs with rigorous training as well as an orientation toward promoting a more just world. SGPIA, founded in 2001, is part of the New School of Public Engagement and has had almost 2,500 graduates from 92 countries. It focuses on finding and implementing solutions to real world problems at the global, regional, national, and local levels. Students choose a concentration in which to focus: Cities and Social Justice, Development and Global Justice, Media and Culture, Governance and Rights, and Conflict and Security. Courses are typically small in size, allowing a lot of interaction among students and between faculty and students. Aside from traditional classroom study, students have options for field-based and other experiential learning opportunities through a practice curriculum.

SGPIA graduates work in national and local governments in their home countries, in multilateral institutions such as the United Nations (UN High Commissioner for Refugees, UN Development Programme, UNICEF, UN Habitat, FAO, UN Women) or the World Bank, or in many local and international non-governmental organizations, such as Human Rights Watch, the International Rescue Committee, Habitat for Humanity, Slum Dwellers International, or Doctors without Borders, as well as think tanks and foundations.

As part of SGPIA's commitment to support the decolonization and democratization of international affairs, the partnership with the OAS speaks to SGPIA's agenda to make its education and opportunities accessible to students from outside the United States. This partnership aims to establish a viable economic pathway for students from the Americas to receive a quality international affairs education that prepares them to confront the challenges of the 21st century.
