Interest-Free Student Loans for Studies in the United States

Students who apply get funded

In 2010, interest free loans were granted to over 90% of all applicants who met minimum eligibility requirements.

What can I use the loan for?

The Rowe Fund is here to help you on your path to a Higher Education. Rowe Fund Loans can be used to help cover the costs of studying in the U.S. for:

- Undergraduate Degrees
- Master's Degrees
- Doctoral Degrees
- Research
- Student Exchange Programs
- Professional Training
- Technical Training
- and more

How much funding can I get?

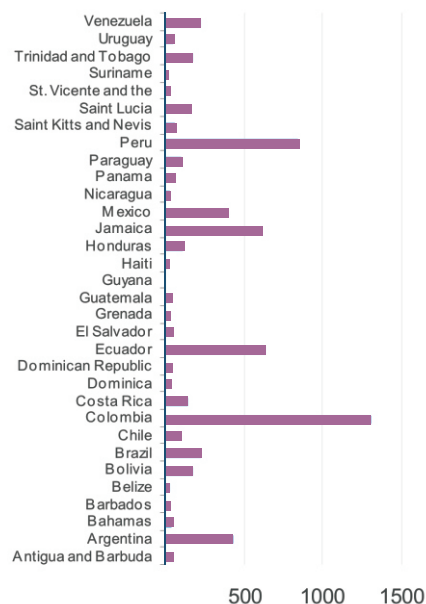

The maximum amount that can be loaned to an individual is US $7,500 per academic period (for example: one university semester) to a maximum of US $15,000 over the period of studies for which the loan is granted.

Important: Loans are granted only to applicants who are no more than two years away from completing their program (for example: the last two years of a four year undergraduate degree). For more complete terms and conditions and for information on how to apply, visit the Rowe Fund website.

Eligibility Requirements

- Be a national of a Latin American or Caribbean OAS Member State.
- Have adequate academic standing or records.
- Demonstrate other sources of financing to cover remaining study costs.
- Be accepted as a full-time student in an accredited higher-learning institution.
- Hold an international student visa.
- Be committed to return to your home country upon completion of the study program.

Value of Loans Granted (1999 - 2010)
by Country (in thousands of USD)

Does it matter where I am from?

The Rowe Fund strives to help students from all Latin American and Caribbean OAS Member States, but we can only help you if you apply!

We encourage students from countries that have been under-represented in the Fund's lending to apply and take advantage of the support available to help finance their higher education in the U.S.
