Message from the Secretary General

Image: Margarita Pérez de Rada
Since the first Electoral Observation Mission (EOM) sent to Costa Rica in 1962, the Organization of American States has observed and accompanied more than 200 electoral processes in the hemisphere. These missions have evolved, in their content as well as their form, hand in hand with the political processes in the region. Those ad hoc and limited-scope missions that were deployed some 50 years ago have been transformed into standardized and institutionalized tools that have a further impact than just on the day of elections.

Since I assumed my post as the Secretary General in 2005, we have observed close to 100 elections in the region, deploying close to 6,000 international election observers. In 2006, the Department of Electoral Cooperation and Observation (DECO) at the Secretariat for Political Affairs began a process to professionalize Electoral Observation Missions. The innovative methodologies implemented in these missions have become a model and guide for both national electoral observation groups and other international bodies.

The work carried out by OAS/DECO in our countries does not end when votes are counted. We understand that democracy is not purely elections, but it is first and foremost elections. Electoral processes are the genesis of democracy. By deploying Electoral Observation Missions, the OAS looks to provide a solid base and consolidate the democratic form of government. Each OAS/EOM presents a report with observations and recommendations directed at strengthening electoral processes. On many occasions, these recommendations translate themselves into technical cooperation projects.

Although the governments and people of the region have been able to strengthen their democracies over the last ten years, there is still work to be done to guarantee more equal conditions when it comes to every citizen’s right to elect and be elected. These challenges related to universal political participation and the integrity of electoral processes, together with security issues faced by countries in our region, make it necessary for the Organization to continue its support for electoral authorities, employing its solid experience in the area of elections.

José Miguel Insulza
General Secretary
For over half a century, electoral observation has been one of the central activities carried out by the OAS. It is, without a doubt, one of the most visible contributions made by the Organization toward the consolidation of democracy in the Hemisphere.

Each new electoral cycle underscores the importance of this task. Nonetheless, there are challenges to maintaining the relevance of electoral observation in a constantly changing political context. If it is true that transparent electoral processes have become the only legitimate form of achieving political power in our Hemisphere, it is also true that the development of electoral institutions in the region has obscured the importance of observation modalities that were so crucial during democratic transitions and previous phases. Threats to the integrity of electoral processes in Latin America and the Caribbean have mutated, forcing us to re-evaluate the work that we carry out.

The year 2014, saturated with elections in the hemisphere, was not only an exceptionally intense period for the Department of Electoral Cooperation and Observation of the Secretariat for Political Affairs, but also an opportunity to introduce innovations to the electoral aspects of our work. As this document details, throughout 2014 we were able to systematically apply methodological instruments to monitor campaign financing and the access of women to political rights, and develop new tools on topics such as voting abroad, electoral justice and security, among others. In this way, we look to cover a larger spectrum of topics that encompass quality and equity in electoral competition, as opposed to focusing on the prevention of election day fraud.

A renewed electoral observation agenda has furthered our technical cooperation efforts with electoral authorities and strengthened the collaboration between the Department and other public and private actors that work within the electoral sector. Particular importance is given to the dissemination of the new electoral ISO norm – in the approval of which DECO played a decisive role– and to the institutionalization of the accreditation authority within the OAS, which will enable third parties to apply the norm. This will be an extraordinarily important instrument to promote modernization within electoral institutions in the hemisphere and elsewhere.

After 2014, the prospects of OAS electoral work look promising. The ability to tap into this potential will depend, as always, on the financial support from member states and permanent observers of the Organization. None of the achievements reached in 2014 would have been possible without their generosity, which we recognize today. In return for this support, we offer highly professional work, a motivated team and the conviction that our labor makes a contribution – both specific and visible – to the realization of the democratic promise to the peoples of the Americas.

Kevin Casas-Zamora
Secretary for Political Affairs
Introduction
This document summarizes the work that we have carried out as part of the Department of Electoral Cooperation and Observation (DECO) at the Secretariat for Political Affairs of the OAS General Secretariat throughout 2014. It details missions and activities that we have implemented, including a general financial report. It also presents guidelines and objectives for 2015.

In 2014, OAS/DECO deployed 15 Electoral Observation Missions (EOMs) and accompanying delegations in 11 countries in the region. We sent 509 experts and international observers from 36 countries and obtained financial support from 18 donor countries. For the first time, these missions incorporated experts to observe subjects such as: participation of indigenous and afro-descendant groups, electoral security and crimes, dispute resolution mechanisms, and voting for citizens residing abroad. Today’s OAS/EOMs generate technical recommendations on key aspects of electoral processes, which are in turn in line with the region’s needs and trends, lending the work a comparative advantage.

Even though these are the most visible tools, Electoral Observation Missions represent only one component of the DECO work cycle. The first piece of this cycle is embodied by the activities that strengthen capacity for both the Department and the electoral bodies in the region; the second piece are electoral missions and accompaniment; and the third involves implementing these recommendations through technical cooperation. Our Department looks to the use of novel tools and techniques in order to confront the challenges of regional electoral authorities in an integral manner.

Among the innovations consolidated in 2014, one that stands out is the new ISO/TS 17582:2014 technical specification, better known as Electoral ISO, published in February 2014. In the same vein, the International Electoral Accreditation Body (IEAB) was created, which will operate within OAS/DECO to establish a fundamental control of the electoral ISO certification process.

In 2015, we will work on developing and publishing new tools that will allow us to standardize observations and recommendations on the subjects that we have incorporated within OAS/EOMs in 2014. At the same time, we will look to implement recurrent recommendations made by Electoral Observation Missions, focusing on those that are the most viable and have the highest potential regional impact. Lastly, we will focus our efforts on establishing the work of the electoral accreditation body.

Gerardo de Icaza
Director, DECO
About DECO
The Department for Electoral Cooperation and Observation (DECO) is part of the Secretariat for Political Affairs (SPA), which in turn makes part of the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States (OAS).

DECO’s Mission

To strengthen democracy through professional electoral observation missions and by following up on the implementation of their recommendations, through technical cooperation with OAS Member States.

Strategic Objectives

DECO, together and in coordination with other OAS areas, contributes to strengthening democracy and consolidating the rule of law, ensuring principles adopted in the OAS Charter and the Inter-American Democratic Charter, by working on:

a) Improving public management through promoting best practices, knowledge exchange and horizontal cooperation between Member States and by promoting equal citizen participation in democracy management.

b) Consolidating electoral processes through the modernization and strengthening electoral of institutions in the Hemisphere, respecting the principles of non-intervention and sovereignty.

c) Fostering a democratic culture and respect for the rule of law and principles of justice.
DECO’s Principles

The guiding principles for DECO’s work are established in the OAS Inter-American Democratic Charter (approved by the General Assembly in 2001):

- “Promote and consolidate representative democracy with respect for the principle of no intervention”.
- “The peoples of the Americas have a right to democracy and their governments have an obligation to promote and defend it.” Art. 1.
DECO’s Work Dynamic

DECO’s work is organized as a cycle, which begins with professionalizing the capacity to observe elections, continues with electoral observation missions and accompaniment, and is finalized by implementing recommendations through technical cooperation. This review on DECO’s work is organized based on this cycle.
Professionalizing Electoral Observation

Image: Rodrigo López Tais
“One of the most important contributions for Latin American democracy is what Electoral Observation, organized and conducted by the OAS, brings to the table. With a proven methodology and teams of competent professionals, DECO checks the pulse of every electoral process. Reports that are presented to local actors and the Permanent Council constitute an important account of findings, but more importantly, contain reflections and suggestions for new electoral processes. Today, we can say with conviction that the OAS contributes to the common goal of achieving quality democracies.”

— Lourdes Flores Nano, Chief of Mission in Panama (2014) and El Salvador (2012)

The professionalization of electoral observation covers all of the activities and projects focused on strengthening the institutional capacity of the OAS on the subject, and also includes studies, tools and meetings that are aimed towards electoral bodies, thus supporting efforts to strengthen their capacity. The more we consolidate the capacity of OAS/DECO, as well as that of electoral bodies, the better are the conditions to implement professional observation exercises free, fair, equal and transparent electoral processes.

Methodology to observe participation of indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants in electoral processes

As part of the process to professionalize OAS/EOMs, DECO has developed the following methodologies to observe aspects that affect the quality of an electoral process:

- Methodology to observe access to media in elections (2011)
- Observing political-electoral financing systems: a manual for the OAS/EOMs (2012)
- A manual to incorporate gender perspective within the OAS/EOMs (2013)

In 2014, a methodology on the participation of indigenous peoples and afro-descendants was designed. The DECO will also be developing new methodologies in 2015.

This objective of the methodology was to create a tool to be used in OAS/EOMs to identify obstacles faced by indigenous and afro-descendant groups in the exercise their political rights, and to develop recommendations that promote the further inclusion and participation of these groups in electoral processes.

What was achieved?

- For the first time, participatory conditions in electoral processes for indigenous and afro-descendant groups were observed and visualized, through the public announcements of OAS/EOMs in Panama, Colombia, Peru and Bolivia.

- OAS/EOMs reports included recommendations to promote the exercise of political rights by indigenous peoples and afro-descendants within electoral processes.

- OAS/DECO now has a rigorous and standardized methodology to observe the political participation of indigenous peoples and afro-descendants in future OAS/EOMs. This methodology will be published during the first trimester of 2015.
The goal of these pilots was to expand the field of observation covered by OAS/EOMs to include topics that affect the quality of an electoral process. The pilots are the first phase within a process that will result in the development of standardized methodologies. The topics observed were voting from abroad, electoral justice and the resolution of electoral disputes, and security in electoral processes.

What was achieved?

- Determination of topics and development of standardized guidelines for their observation.
- OAS/EOM reports included recommendations on improving norms and practices regarding voting from abroad, electoral justice and security in electoral processes.
- Project profiles were developed for the creation of observation methodologies specific to each subject-area. The development process for these methodologies will begin in 2015.
The objective of the online course was to improve the conceptual, technical and logistical knowledge of potential international observers, in order to strengthen the OAS Electoral Observation Missions. The course was organized together with the Online Campus of the Department for Effective Public Management of the OAS and took place during September and October.

DECO received almost 800 applications, of which 100 participants from OAS member and observer states were selected.

After five weeks of online instruction, 73 participants passed the final evaluation and achieved certification in the OAS electoral observation methodology.

DECO looks forward to including some of the participants from this first edition of the online course, namely those with the highest passing scores, in the Electoral Observation Missions of 2015.
The objective of the RAE is to promote the effective exchange of knowledge, experiences and best practices on electoral administration in the region. RAEs also facilitate horizontal cooperation aimed at improving the conduct of elections in the Americas. During this edition, an exhibit on electoral literature and technology was organized in order to promote innovation on the subject among participants.

| Central topic | - Quality management of electoral processes
                 - Government intervention in elections
                 - Challenges to electoral institutionalization. |
| Participants  | 38 high level authorities from 22 countries, representatives of 26 electoral bodies. |

What was achieved?

- Challenges and best practices within the topics covered by the meeting were analyzed.
- Relationships between DECO and electoral authorities were strengthened.
- Technology tools and publications were disseminated among electoral authorities.
- The next meeting of electoral authorities was coordinated to take place in Brazil, with support from the Supreme Electoral Tribunal.
The goal of these conferences is to support the professionalization of electoral officials in Latin America and the Caribbean, through fostering knowledge and the exchange of experiences and best practices.

About the VII Conference

| What is the Electoral Conference? | A space for professionalization and exchange of experiences between electoral body officials. |
| Date | September 22-26 |
| Location | Mexico, DF |
| With collaboration from | National Electoral Institute of México (INE), International IDEA, Trust of the Americas (TRUST), and the International Foundation for Electoral Systems (IFES) |
| Central topic | Accessibility and electoral participation |
| Participants | 28 electoral body officials from the hemisphere |

What was achieved?

- 28 officials were trained and informed about the tools and mechanisms currently implemented in other countries, in order to foster better accessibility and participation in electoral processes.
- Through the review of challenges and needs presented at the event, a methodology for observing participation of persons with different abilities within electoral processes was developed.
Fifth Meeting of the Working Group on American Electoral Jurisprudence

The goal of the meeting is to continue the exchange of experiences between those bodies responsible for carrying out justice on electoral matters, present a new publication and update the database with relevant cases and decrees. Additionally, initiatives in future work were discussed.

Information about the Meeting

- What is the working group?

  A group of ten electoral bodies that carry out initiatives to systematize and disseminate electoral jurisprudence and develop related activities with the application of electoral justice.

- Date

  November 11

- Location

  Panama City, Panama

- With collaboration from

  Electoral Tribunal of Panama (TE)

- Central topic

  American Electoral Jurisprudence Yearbook

- Participants

  Representatives from ten electoral bodies in the hemisphere

What was achieved?

- The sixth publication, entitled “The Latin American Yearbook on Electoral Jurisprudence”, was disseminated, a collection of cases of electoral jurisdictional bodies on the internal democracy of political parties.

- The Electoral Jurisprudence Portal, a database of judicial sentences, was updated with 300 new entries.
  See: www.jurisprudenciaelectoral.org

- The Group agreed to support DECO in the development of a methodology to observe justice and electoral dispute resolution within OAS/EOMs.
A new text is available, which provides tips on how to use public financing as a mechanism to foster political participation of women at different stages of the electoral cycle. The toolkit presents a starting point for legal reforms and public policy that are aimed at strengthening equality and transparency in political financing. The document will be presented and published in the first trimester of 2015.

Study on Electoral Participation in Central America

The goal of this study was to analyze factors that influence electoral participation in Central America and contribute, through specific recommendations, to the promotion of higher participation. The study included site visits to obtain data on electoral rolls in five countries: Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Panama.

Key Recommendations of the Study (Summary)

- Improve registration in civil registries to update voter censuses. Four paths forward are suggested: 1. Establish a uniform and standardized procedure of registering deceased persons, 2. Transfer civil registry from municipalities to the national level, 3. Apply registry amnesties that allow any civil act to be registered without a penalty.
- Expand the right to vote outside of national borders and improve opportunities for voting abroad: 1. Make pre-requisites for registration abroad more flexible, 2. Allow voting to take place throughout the weekend, 3. Establish voting centers in locations with a high concentration of immigrants, among others.

What was achieved?

- The first study on electoral participation in the region has been conducted, which uses data from electoral registries to analyze factors that influence electoral participation.
- The study includes unpublished data on each one of the researched countries, which aids the study and understanding of electoral participation in the region.
- The recommendations provided in the study are a starting point to promote and increase levels and quality of electoral participation in the countries in the region.

Toolkit to strengthen control on political financing with a gender perspective

The goal is to provide electoral bodies in the region with a tool to strengthen technical capacity in the control of electoral financing with a gender perspective.

What was achieved?

- A new text is available, which provides tips on how to use public financing as a mechanism to foster political participation of women at different stages of the electoral cycle.
- The toolkit presents a starting point for legal reforms and public policy that are aimed at strengthening equality and transparency in political financing. The document will be presented and published in the first trimester of 2015.
The database is a tool that collects and systematizes information on each of the OAS/EOMs that has been deployed in the Hemisphere. Historic information on EOMs carried out by the OAS since 1962 will be available through a web page, and detailed information will be available on the results of missions deployed from 2010 onwards. It will also include EOM recommendations and information on follow-up of their implementation.

The goal of the database is to systematize information produced by EOMs and make this information accessible to OAS officials, who will manage future missions, as well as to the general public.

Information produced by the OAS/EOMs, which represents a valuable collection of data on the development of democracy in the region, is now available and organized in one source.

The information will be available to the public during the first trimester of 2015, in order to contribute to the debate, research, and strengthening of democracy in the region.

DECO signed agreements with...

The objective of the Memorandum of Understanding is to establish a relationship of mutual cooperation regarding electoral observation and assistance and to cooperate in strengthening democratic institutions. Potential joint activities include developing electoral observation methodologies and manuals; participation in electoral observation missions; organization of events and activities, among others.

The objective of the Supplementary Agreement is to establish mutual areas of interest, regarding which the CNE and the GS/OAS will cooperate on activities to strengthen the development of each institution’s functions. This cooperation will be framed under the areas of electoral justice; quality assurance and ISO certification; the analysis of political rights of citizens deprived of their freedom, and electoral federalism.
Observing and accompanying electoral processes
“This is a flagship program of the OAS, which plays an invaluable role in building capacity, supporting and enhancing democracy and human rights in Latin America and the Caribbean. While the Caribbean has a strong tradition of democratic elections, this small region presents major challenges to democracy in an increasingly globalized world. This program provides critical capacity in supporting the democratic tradition of the region”

Rosina Wiltshire, Chief of Mission in Antigua and Barbuda (2014) and Saint Lucia (2011)

In 2014, DECO deployed electoral observation missions and accompanying delegations in every Member State in the region that extended an invitation to the Organization of American States. In total, DECO deployed missions to 11 countries in the hemisphere:

- Countries where elections were observed: 8
- Countries where elections were accompanied: 3
- EOMs deployed: 12
- Accompaniment delegations: 3
- Number of observers deployed: 509
- Observer nationalities: 36
- Donor countries: 18

1 More than one EOM was deployed in some countries, since two or three electoral processes took place in the same year.
2 Unlike electoral observation, where a core group and international observers are deployed autonomously in-country, an accompaniment involves participation in programs organized by the electoral authority of the host country.
The Electoral Observation Mission of the Organization of American States (OAS/EOM) for the presidential elections in El Salvador was led by Former Foreign Minister of Bolivia, Dr. Gustavo Fernández.

During election day, the mission deployed 62 experts and international observers across the country’s 14 departments. Since none of the candidates received more than 50% of the valid votes cast during election day on February 2nd, a second round was held between the two candidates that obtained the most votes. On the day of the election, the mission deployed 75 experts and international observers across the same departments.

Some of the OAS/EOM recommendations:

- Adopt measures to enable the cleansing of the electoral census to obtain an electoral registry that correctly represents all the citizens eligible to vote.
- Make the conditions for registering to vote abroad more flexible.
- That the TSE executes promptly and ex officio its control of the participation and intervention of public authorities in the electoral campaign.
- Reinforce measures for accountability in political party spending, regulate information on their sources of financing, and create the financial conditions for fair participation by new parties.

The Verbal Report was presented to the OAS Permanent Council on April 9, 2014 and can be found at http://www.oas.org/es/sap/deco/MOE_informe/InformeVerbal_El_Salvador.pdf
The Electoral Observation Mission of the Organization of American States (OAS/EOM) in presidential and legislative elections in Costa Rica was led by Josefina Vázquez Mota, former presidential candidate and Minister of Social Development and Public Education in Mexico.

During election day on February 2, 29 international observers were deployed across the country’s seven provinces. Additionally, OAS/EOM experts observed political financing, gender equity and media access during the first round. Since none of the 13 presidential candidates obtained 40% of valid votes during the first round, the two candidates receiving the most votes went to a second round of elections. The OAS/EOM was also present during the second round.

Some of the OAS/EOM recommendations:

- Incorporate legislation on free media slots, to guarantee a minimum access level for candidates.
- Explore the possibility of granting public financing to parties in advance, while also establishing mechanisms that do not require liquid collateral.
- Consider integral strategies within political parties that contribute to developing and fostering female leadership within their ranks.
- Increase electoral participation through civic education campaigns and by strengthening the work of political parties.

The Verbal Report was presented to the OAS Permanent Council on July 9, 2014 and can be found at http://www.oas.org/es/sap/deco/moe_informe/InfoVerbalMOECostaRica2014.pdf
The Electoral Oversight Mission of the Organization of American States for the legislative elections in Colombia was led by José Antonio Viera-Gallo, former Senator and Minister of the Presidency of Chile.

During election day, the mission deployed 27 international observers, who visited 136 poll stations in five departments across the country. The EOM specifically observed the political financing system and gender equity in the electoral process.

Some of the OAS/EOM recommendations:

- Review possible reasons for a high number of spoiled ballots, such as the design of the ballot and the information and training provided to voters and polling station workers.
- Guarantee the necessary conditions so that all of the political parties and movements can open accounts within the banking system, as well as establish incentives or serious sanctions to support accountability and transparency.
- Promote legal reforms that promote parity and establish measures such as alternation and campaign financing targeted to women.

The Verbal Report was presented to the OAS Permanent Council on July 9, 2014 and can be found at http://www.oas.org/es/sap/deco/moe_informe/Informe_Verbal_Colombia2014.pdf

3 In Colombia, an organization called “Electoral Observation Mission (EOM)” already exists and, thus, the OAS adopted the name “Electoral Oversight Mission”. The responsibilities and duties of Electoral Oversight Missions are identical to those of a regular OAS mission.
The Electoral Oversight Mission of the Organization of American States for the presidential elections in Colombia was led by the former President of Costa Rica, José María Figueres, and deployed 64 observers, who visited 398 polling centers in 24 departments as well as the Capital District.

The mission’s team of experts focused their work on political-electoral financing, electoral security, electoral justice and voting abroad. Since none of the candidates obtained more than 50% of valid votes on elections held on May 25th, a second round was held between the two candidates who obtained the first and second majority of the votes. For this second round of elections, the mission had 74 international observers deployed across 27 departments and the Capital District, who visited 464 voting centers.

Some of the OAS/EOM recommendations:

- Strengthen civil consciousness and promote suffrage, in order to increase voter turnout.
- Strengthen the legal framework on voting abroad to prevent situations in which partial elections results are made available before the closing of the election.
- Strengthen transparency mechanisms for campaign resources, establish clear sanctions to this regard and enforce their application.
- Work towards full participation of citizens in the nomination process for polling station officials, through establishing impartial and inclusive databases managed by electoral authorities.

The Verbal Report was presented to the OAS Permanent Council on August 6, 2014 and can be found at http://www.oas.org/es/sap/deco/moe_informe/Informe_Verbal_Colombia2014.pdf
Electoral Observation Mission (OAS/EOM)

Presidential and Legislative Elections
May 4, 2014

Number of nationalities among EOM members: 19

EOM members: 53

Disaggregated

By gender:

The Electoral Observation Mission of the Organization of American States (OAS/EOM) for the presidential and legislative elections in Panama was led by former presidential candidate and Peruvian legislator.

On election day, 53 experts and international observers were deployed by the OAS across the entire country, visited 290 polling centers. During this mission, experts observed the system of political financing, electoral security, electoral dispute resolution, the role of the media, gender equity, participation of indigenous and afro-descendant groups, and voting abroad.

Some of the OAS/EOM recommendations:

- Review regulation on political-electoral financing, in order to better control the use of public resources, private donations and electoral spending.
- Strengthen the Electoral Attorney’s Office when it comes to its prerogatives, human resources and materials; to prevent complaints received regarding omissions in handling complaints and the lack of actions taken with regards to evident violations of electoral laws.
- Re-establish the National Commission on Electoral Reforms, to promote dialogue and possible improvements in the electoral process

Electoral Observation Mission (OAS/EOM)

Antigua and Barbuda

General Elections
June 12, 2014

Number of nationalities among EOM members: 11
EOM members: 16
Disaggregated by gender:

The OAS Electoral Observation Mission for the General Elections in Antigua and Barbuda was led by Dr. Rosina Wiltshire, from Barbados.

On election day, a gender-balanced team of 16 members visited 100% of the 164 polling stations distributed in 49 polling districts across the country’s 17 Constituencies. The team of experts observed the political financing system, resolution of electoral disputes, and gender equity.

Some of the OAS/EOM recommendations:
- To restitute the continuous registration process by the Electoral Commission, as per current legislation.
- To complete the counting of ballots at polling stations.
- To ensure that the Boundaries Commission carries out functions as established in the legislation.
- To promote further gender equity in political participation.
- To strengthen transparency in campaign financing.

The Verbal Report was presented to the OAS Permanent Council on July 9, 2014 and can be found at http://www.oas.org/es/sap/deco/moe_informe/InfoVerbalMOEAntiguaBarbuda2014.pdf
The Electoral Observation Mission of the Organization of American States for the regional and municipal elections in Peru was led by Uruguayan ex-Senator Sergio Abreu.

On the day of the elections, the mission deployed 34 experts and international observers, who visited 174 centers in 15 departments. The OAS/EOM specifically observed electoral organization and technology, political-electoral financing, gender equity, electoral security, justice and dispute resolution, and participation of indigenous and Afro-descendant groups.

Some of the OAS/EOM recommendations:

- Integrate evaluation of the disputes resolution mechanism.
- Ensure that political parties receive public financing and strengthen the capacity of authorities responsible for the control of campaign financing.
- Require gender alternation in the conformation of candidate lists.
- Review the transmission and publication system for electoral results, so that they can be consulted more quickly.
- Adjust security protocols, with a special focus on areas presenting risks during electoral processes.

The Press Release, presented by the Chief of Mission the day after elections can be read at: http://www.oas.org/es/sap/deco/moe/Peru2014/docs/CP_Oct6.pdf

The Electoral Observation Mission of the Organization of American States (OAS/EOM) in the general elections in Bolivia was led by former Guatemalan President Alvaro Colom. During election day, the mission deployed 62 experts and international observers in nine departments across the country.

Polling stations opened on time and had all the necessary material for voting. The OAS/EOM observed the political financing system, electoral security, gender equity, media access, participation of indigenous peoples, voting abroad and electoral justice.

Some of the OAS/EOM recommendations:

- Discuss the possibility of splitting electoral organization functions and those of resolving conflicts and controversies, so that they are not the responsibility of the same body.

- Consider the possibility of passing a law for political organizations that deals with access to media, so that it can be inclusive and follow democratic principles.

- Promote a law for political organizations that will include equitable access to media and mixed financing.

The Verbal Report was presented to the OAS Permanent Council on February 11, 2015 and can be found at http://www.oas.org/es/sap/deco/MOE_informe/Informe_Verbal_Bolivia2014.pdf
The OAS Electoral Observation Mission for the General Elections in Dominica was led by the OAS Secretary for Multidimensional Security, Adam Blackwell.

On Election Day, the members of the delegation visited the country’s 21 constituencies, and observed the voting process from the opening of the polls to the transmission of the preliminary results. The Mission gathered information about the status of the recommendations made by the OAS/EOM in 2009, financing of political campaigns, and gender equity in the political process.

Some of the OAS/EOM recommendations:

- Review and update the voter registry according to the provisions established by the electoral laws, ensuring that the electors on the list are only those eligible to vote.
- Issue identification cards before the next electoral process, in compliance with the legislation.
- Promote legislation on political campaign financing, to ensure equity and transparency in the electoral process.
- Put forth initiatives geared towards enhancing leadership roles of women in the political process.

Eastern Republic of Uruguay
Presidential and Parliamentary Elections - first round
October 26, 2014
OAS Representatives: Lázaro Cárdenas, Kevin Casas-Zamora and Gerardo de Icaza

The OAS, in response to an invitation from the Electoral Court, sent a high-level technical team that held meetings with presidential candidates and visited various polling centers on the day of elections. The delegation observed a high degree of organization, peaceful conduct of the elections and citizenry trust in the electoral system. The OAS would like to highlight the high level of political debate that was seen during this campaign, a symbol of respect towards the parties, candidates and democracy’s institutions.

Electoral Accompaniment
Federative Republic of Brazil
General Elections
OAS Representatives: Alfonso Quiñonez and Tyler Finn

In response to an invitation from the Superior Electoral Tribunal, DECO sent a delegation to participate in the program for international visitors at the general elections held in Brazil. The delegation attended various presentations on the Brazilian electoral system, Brazil’s political situation and the new electronic voting system. On election day, OAS representatives observed the voting process at various polling centers in Brasilia, accompanying audits of the electronic voting machines as well as the results transmission process. Thanks to the visit to Brazil and the established contacts, the Superior Electoral Tribunal has agreed to host the next Inter-American Meeting of Electoral Authorities.

OAS Representatives: Lázaro Cárdenas and Rosa Serpa.

The OAS delegation held meetings with electoral authorities, candidates, civil society representatives, media representatives and political leaders prior to elections day. The delegation directly observed voting in La Morita and in the city of Cuenca, Azuay. In La Morita the voting process was carried out normally, while there were long line-ups in Cuenca. The delegation was also at the CNE command center for the transmission of preliminary results. The first results to be transmitted were from those provinces where electronic voting was held. The OAS delegation supported the CNE authorities in evaluating and auditing the TREP computer system.
Follow-up to OAS/EOM recommendations
We welcome the participation of the OAS/EOM as a fundamental pillar in electoral observations, as faithful impartial witnesses, and zealous guardians of the evolution and development of Panamanian democracy, from the first moment constitutional order was implemented in 1989. We congratulate the human and technical support that contributed to the success of the electoral process.

Erasmo Pinilla, President of the Electoral Tribunal of Panama

Follow-up to OAS/EOM recommendations is a final and fundamental step in the DECO work cycle, during which recommendations are classified by subject and their relevance is determined based on three criteria: recurrence, impact and viability. The goal is to implement initiatives and projects of national, subregional and hemispheric technical cooperation, based on OAS/EOM recommendations, which comply with the above-mentioned criteria.

Technical Cooperation
In June of 2013, responding to a request made by the CNE, DECO carried out a diagnostic on the viability of certifying against ISO standards. In March of 2014, the OAS and the CNE signed a cooperation agreement to begin the implementation phase of the project. The GS/OAS role is limited to the provision of technical expertise and the monitoring of project progress.

The principal objective of the technical cooperation is the strengthening of the performance and transparency of the National Electoral Council, and the enhancement of public trust in the institution, through implementing a Quality Management System and certification under the ISO/TS 17582.

What is a Quality Management System (QMS)?
A system aimed at strengthening institutionalism and promoting the professionalization, legitimacy and performance of electoral institutions, with a focus on continual improvement in the services provided to the citizenry.

About the Electoral Norm ISO/TS 17582:2014
The idea for an ISO electoral standard arose from the experience of implementing QMS in the electoral arena. Electoral bodies in the Americas and around the world can be certified against ISO/TS 17582. The electoral ISO technical specification defines specific requirements for eight electoral processes that are considered fundamental in any election: 1) voter registration, 2) registration of political organizations and candidates, 3) electoral logistics, 4) voting, 5) vote count and results publication, 6) electoral education, 7) campaign financing control, and 8) electoral dispute resolution.

What was achieved?
- The CNE is in a better position to successfully implement its quality management system, due to strengthened technical, personnel and institutional capacity.
- It is expected that the CNE will obtain its ISO/TS 17582:2014 certification during the first semester of 2015, becoming the first institution in the world to be compliant with the new electoral ISO technical specification.
Certification against the ISO norm is based on comprehensive audits that are carried out by third-party certification bodies. Based on the ISO model, each certification body must be previously accredited by an external organization, known as an accreditation body. When this project began, there were no accreditation bodies or certification bodies with experience in electoral matters. The goal set by DECO was to create an International Electoral Accreditation Body (IEAB) under the auspices of the OAS.

The New Electoral ISO Norm and the Establishment of the International Electoral Accreditation Body (IEAB) at the OAS

In May 2014, the OAS General Secretariat signed Executive Order 14-01, which officially establishes the International Electoral Accreditation Body (IEAB) within DECO.

The OAS has received technical cooperation requests on electoral ISO from three countries: Bolivia, Colombia, and Paraguay.

The IEAB accredited four lead auditors and two certifying bodies. The first certification processes are expected to begin in 2015. The IEAB is currently operating on provisional basis.

To reach this goal, DECO...

- Designed a web page that will serve as the main interface between the IEAB and its clients.
- Developed internal management procedures, including operation and supervision manuals.
- Created standard evaluation materials that will be used by electoral authorities and certified auditors, to evaluate under the electoral ISO norm.
- Promoted the electoral ISO norm through a workshop presented in Costa Rica (59 participants, from 29 institutions from 18 countries, including members from 21 electoral bodies in Latin America)
- Accredited lead auditors and certifying bodies in Washington DC.

What was achieved?

- In May 2014, the OAS General Secretariat signed Executive Order 14-01, which officially establishes the International Electoral Accreditation Body (IEAB) within DECO.
- The OAS has received technical cooperation requests on electoral ISO from three countries: Bolivia, Colombia, and Paraguay.
- The IEAB accredited four lead auditors and two certifying bodies. The first certification processes are expected to begin in 2015. The IEAB is currently operating on provisional basis.
- The web page is currently under construction and will be available at:
  www.oas-ieab.org
In October 2014, responding to a request from the Plurinational Electoral Body (OEP) of Bolivia, DECO put together a team of five international consultants, who began working in December 2014. The project is scheduled to carry on until March 2015. The goal was to provide technical cooperation to the Plurinational Electoral Body (OEP) of Bolivia, to improve current processes and procedures related to the cleansing and building of the biometric electoral roll, in anticipation of the March 2015 elections.

What was achieved?

- Of the 1.2 million inconsistencies detected, 39.2% (480 thousand) were resolved thanks to OAS intervention, and the beneficiaries will be able to vote in the 2015 elections.
- The electoral roll increased by 5.8% once updated with the DPI, going from 83.6% to 89.4%.
- The TSE will be able to carry out at least two more information cross-checks, which will allow it to strengthen its work by improving the quality of the electoral roll.

In October 2014, responding to a request from the Plurinational Electoral Body (OEP) of Bolivia, DECO put together a team of five international consultants, who began working in December 2014. The project is scheduled to carry on until March 2015. The goal was to provide technical cooperation to the Plurinational Electoral Body (OEP) of Bolivia, to improve current processes and procedures related to the cleansing and building of the biometric electoral roll, in anticipation of the March 2015 elections.

What was achieved?

- There is an assessment, recommendations and an action plan, which is expected to be implemented in the first few months of 2015.
- It is expected that by implementing the action plan, the OEP of Bolivia will receive technical cooperation that will strengthen its work in future electoral processes.
The Supreme Elections Tribunal (TSE) of Costa Rica contacted DECO to commence a technical cooperation regarding electoral technology. As a result, DECO focused their accompaniment on electronic voting.

The goal of the pilot was to provide technical accompaniment and advise on all of the activities related to the implementation of the electronic pilot for voting abroad, for the presidential elections that took place in Costa Rica in 2014.

Based on the findings and recommendations presented by the DECO, the TSE of Costa Rica has decided to invest more resources and time to perfect the implementation of electronic voting abroad for future electoral processes.

The TSE has the option of implementing a consolidated and effective electronic voting system in future elections.

What was achieved?

- First electronic voting abroad pilot in Costa Rica

TSE Technical Team
The goal of the technical cooperation in this case was to improve the development of activities related to the Preliminary Electoral Results Transmission (TREP) for the presidential elections held on October 26, 2014 in Uruguay.

- The Uruguay Electoral Court activated security measures in certain areas of information technology, thus reducing risks and strengthening information protection.
- Administrative measures were adopted, such as the creation of an electoral process plan and calendar, which establishes activities and those responsible for them. This document is a fundamental instrument to control and follow-up with each electoral process organized by the Electoral Court.
- For the 2014 electoral process, the Electoral Court adopted a computer cloud, thus decreasing response time for presentation of electoral results and reducing operational risks by eliminating costs related to a large-scale infrastructure.

What is TREP?

- It is the mechanism used by the CE to quickly transmit preliminary electoral results, by digitalizing, consolidating and publishing data from the 6,948 tallies received at the National and Departmental Computer Center. Though TREP has no legal validity, it has an important media and political impact, since published information is used by political actors to determine voting trends.

Financial needs, DECO – 2015

Our donors and other institutions interested in financially supporting DECO’s programs and projects can channel their contributions by subject or area of work, by country or region, or by steps within the cycle of a project’s implementation. At the same time, they are able to direct their contributions towards one of the three large areas of work within DECO: professionalization of electoral observation, observation and accompaniment of electoral processes, and follow-up of recommendations from EOM and technical cooperation assessments.
Priorities for DECO in 2015
Development and implementation of new electoral observation methodologies

The development and implementation of these methodologies will mean an important advancement in the continued process of institutionalization and standardization of electoral observation practices at the OAS, and at the same time look to create new technical tools that will allow the OAS to expand its observation of electoral processes. With these tools, the OAS/DECO looks to improve in its three focus areas within electoral observation:

1. Political Integration:

   • Political participation of indigenous communities and afro-descendants: looking to specifically identify the obstacles faced by indigenous and afro-descendant communities in the exercise of political rights as well as the limitations to effective participation in electoral processes. To effectively observe barriers in the exercise of the right to vote and to present a candidacy for elections, among other elements.

   • Voting for citizens residing abroad: the goal is to examine the extension of political rights of citizens residing abroad, by creating indicators that permit the analysis of the legal framework; observe the organization and implementation processes for voting abroad and obstacles to effective implementation. The methodology will identify challenges, opportunities, trends and changes through systematically collecting data from different countries in the region.

   • Program to promote electoral participation for people with different abilities: through this project proposal, DECO intends to develop an integral program that will incorporate the subject of the political participation of disabled persons, beginning with the collection and analysis of unpublished information through OAS/EOMs. To issue recommendations to electoral bodies in the region, aimed at improving the capacity, accessibility and participation of persons with different abilities in the electoral arena.

2. Electoral Process:

   • Manual to Observe Electoral Dispute Resolution Processes and Mechanisms: establishes criteria to verify the level of adaptation to international standards of a jurisdictional system, legal system and effective practices that govern the process and resolution of conflicts related to suffrage and authenticity of electoral results. In its first draft, the manual analyzes such aspects as: a) independent and impartial tribunals; b) access to justice; and c) just and effective processes.

3. Electoral Integrity:

   • Security and Electoral Crimes: to create a standardized instrument to observe issues related to security that affect election day, such as protection of electoral materials and voting locations, security provision for citizens, observers, journalists and members of electoral authorities; as well as the existence of structures that monitor risk situations, with the objective of mitigating acts of violence or organized crime. The methodology will analyze the definition and types of electoral crimes; and the procedures and resources available to the authorities when dealing with electoral crime.

In order to contribute to the improvement in the quality of electoral processes, the EOMs that will be carried out in the different countries in the region will be able to apply these tools that will allow the formulation of specific recommendations on the above-mentioned topics.

Implementation of OAS/EOMs recommendations through technical cooperation

Systemizing and categorizing the recommendations from the last 25 Electoral Observation Missions shed light on the fact that out of 323 recommendations, 54% are related to weaknesses in electoral organization, 15% to shortcomings in the political electoral financing system, 11% were related to gender equity in electoral contest, 8% propose the review the political and legal systems, 6% to changes to electoral technology, 4% highlight deficits in media regulation, and finally, 2% are directed towards the creation of mechanisms to ensure compliance with the law when it comes to the vote count.

This analysis gives way to the project titled “Implementation of Recommendations from Electoral Observation Missions”. The project looks to strengthen the technical, human and institutional capacity of electoral authorities in member states, so that they are able to implement the recommendations made by the OAS electoral observation missions regarding electoral organization, political electoral financing, gender, ISO and electoral security. In order to respond with specific tools and support the member states in implementing the most recurrent and impacting recommendations, the project proposes the following activities:

Electoral organization

- Implementation of a standardized methodology for audits of electoral registries.
- Evaluation of the electoral registry and implementation of findings.
- Implementation of a Geographic Information System (GIS) to define constituency boundaries in the Caribbean countries with parliamentary systems.

Political-electoral financing

- Development of an accountability software and promotion of transparency in electoral campaigning.
- Creation of a regional portal for access to information and transparency regarding political electoral financing.
- Development of a mobile application to promote transparency through visibility of costs in electoral propaganda in the Caribbean.
Gender

- Conduct regional meetings to promote female leadership and participation in the politics of the Americas, and monitoring of established agreements.

Quality Management and Electoral Security Systems

- Creation of a program for sustainable security management for electoral information technology.

International Electoral Accreditation Body

As part of the efforts to promote tools to improve electoral processes to the Member States, the OAS/DECO will focus on implementing the International Electoral Accreditation Body (IEAB) in 2015. This body will have a global relevance, as the OAS will be able accrediting organizations to certify electoral authorities against ISO/TS 17582:2014, not only in the region but anywhere in the world. The IEAB, which will operate at the OAS, will be a fundamental control within the electoral ISO certification process. In 2015, the OAS is looking forward to the seeing the first countries in the region obtain certification against ISO/TS 17582:2014 certification, a process which will be governed by the methodology enforced by the IEAB.

First meeting of OAS Electoral Observation Mission Chiefs

The First Meeting of Chiefs of OAS Electoral Observation Missions (EOM) will be an important opportunity that will bring together the EOM Chiefs of Missions to promote open dialogue and reflect on the different experiences and perspectives of electoral observation. The forum will cover electoral observation in Central America, South America and the Caribbean, including both presidential and municipal elections. The meeting will be held in March 2015.

2015 Electoral Calendar and OAS Electoral Observation Missions (OAS/EOM)

According to the Inter-American Democratic Charter, for the OAS to deploy an Electoral Observation Mission (OAS/EOM) for any type of elections, it must first receive and official invitation from the Member States. A calendar of countries that will carry out elections in 2015 and could invite the OAS to deploy an EOM is presented below:
