

CHAPTER III ACTIVITIES OF THE THEMATIC AND COUNTRY RAPPORTEURSHIPS AND PROMOTION AND TRAINING ACTIVITIES

- 1. The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights performs observation and monitoring duties for specific human rights issues through its country rapporteurships and thematic rapporteurships. It must be indicated out that the IACHR conducts the above-mentioned observation and monitoring activities on the human rights situation in the region's countries, as well as with respect to the issues of the rapporteurships, units, and special rapporteurships, on the basis of a series of mechanisms such as on-site visits, country visits, press releases, requests for information to the states (letters based on Articles 41 y 18), among others.
- 2. The IACHR also conducts training and promotion activities, oftentimes in coordination with the above-mentioned rapporteurships, through its specialized working areas, for the dissemination of and training on inter-American human rights standards that have been drawn up on the basis of the doctrine and case law of the inter-American human rights system (IAHRS). This is aimed at promoting a better understanding and appreciation about their scope in civil society, the network of social stakeholders, and member states and, where relevant, for their application and incorporation into the decisions, regulatory frameworks, and public policies with a human rights approach. For the IACHR, capacity building of state institutions constitute, at present, the basis for putting rights into practice in the countries.
- 3. It must be indicated that, in 1990, the Inter-American Commission started establishing the rapporteurships for the purpose of providing assistance to certain persons, groups, and collectivities that are especially exposed to human rights violations because of their situation of vulnerability and historical discrimination of which they have been the targets. The purpose of creating a thematic rapporteurship is to strengthen, promote, and systematize the work of the Inter-American Commission itself on concrete issues. In that regard, they raise awareness about human rights in the peoples of the Americas.¹ The rapporteurships also support the IACHR's work in developing legal standards, contribute to knowledge about the mechanisms of the inter-American system, and promote access to both domestic and international justice for persons, groups, and collectivities associated with this thematic approach. In turn, the IACHR rapporteurships have been collaborating steadily with various sectors, working on their specialized issues, including the United Nations rapporteurships and other universal mechanisms, civil society organizations, states, and academia, among others.
- 4. The IACHR's thematic rapporteurships are governed by the provisions set forth in Article 15 of the Commission's Rules of Procedure and in the practices established by the Commission in plenary. The Commission approves the reports and work plans of each rapporteurship and oversees the daily implementation of its mandates. Because of their nature as specialized thematic offices created by the IACHR itself, the Rules of Procedure of the IACHR define with precision the procedures for their creation and for the selection of the thematic rapporteurs. The Rules of Procedure also govern the IACHR's functions, in which its rapporteurships participate. The above-mentioned norms and practices constitute an important set of rules governing the conduct of all the rapporteurships and establish rigorous procedures for taking action.
- 5. The thematic rapporteurships also collaborate in fulfilling IACHR's principal mandate of promoting observance and defense of human rights, and serve as consultative bodies of the OAS in this area.<sup>2</sup> In that respect, they can request the governments of states to provide reports on the measures they are adopting in the area of human rights,<sup>3</sup> as well as issue recommendations to adopt progressive measures for the benefit of human rights, in line with the IACHR's mandate. The rapporteurs also prepare studies and reports that are relevant to their thematic functions.<sup>4</sup> As part of their duties, the rapporteurs can conduct working visits to states and participate in IACHR's on-site visits, with the consent or at the invitation of the respective government. At present, the IACHR has 11 thematic rapporteurships:

- Rights of indigenous peoples (1990);
- Rights of women (1994);
- Right of migrants (1996);
- Rights of the child (1998);
- Rights of persons deprived of liberty (2004);
- Rights of Afrodescendants and against racial discrimination (2005);
- Human rights defenders (2011);
- Rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans, and intersex persons (2014);
- Rights of persons with disabilities (2017);
- Rights of older persons (2017); and
- Memory, truth, and justice (2017).
- The IACHR also has the authority to create special rapporteurships headed by other persons designated by the Commission.<sup>5</sup> In this context of action, there is a Special Rapporteurship for Freedom of Expression<sup>6</sup> since 1997, which is a permanent office, with its own operational structure and functional autonomy, which operates within the IACHR's legal framework. On April 3, 2014, the IACHR also decided to create a Special Rapporteurship on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights (SRESCER), bearing in mind the interdependent and indivisible nature of human rights and the importance of protecting and promoting economic, social, and cultural rights in the region. With the creation of this new rapporteurship, which is currently functioning as a unit, the IACHR strives to build up and intensify its work defending and protecting the economic, social, and cultural rights of the inhabitants of the Americas. As background to the creation of the SRESCER, it is worth recalling that, during the capacity building process of the inter-American system, both OAS member states and other stakeholders of the system voiced their interest in focusing greater attention on the issues of economic, social, and cultural rights (ESCRs). As a result of this process, the IACHR created specialized institutional forums. In effect, at its 146 period of sessions, held on October 29 to November 16, 2012, the Commission, as a result of its commitment to strengthen its work in the area of economic, social, and cultural rights and in response to suggestions made by the state and civil society, created a Unit on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights (ESCR Unit).
- 7. At the 171 period of sessions held on February 7 to 16, 2019, in Bolivia, the IACHR decided to broaden and deepen the existing institutional framework for monitoring certain issues. Concretely, the IACHR decided that the Unit on Memory, Truth, and Justice, the Unit on the Rights of Older Persons, and the Unit on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities would become thematic rapporteurships. In addition, it expanded the mandate of the Rapporteurship on the Rights of Persons Deprived of Liberty to include preventing and combating torture, as well as that of the Rapporteurship on Human Rights Defenders, which now encompasses issues pertaining to the situation of justice operators.
- 8. Among their functions, the rapporteurships have availed themselves of their mandate to promote regional initiatives on issues that are priorities in the region, relevant to their areas of focus. These initiatives have been strengthened by participatory processes for information gathering, including the perspective of states and civil society, the drafting of regional reports on pressing issues and their presentation, the organization of promotional activities to disseminate knowledge about the standards of the inter-American system, the circulation of questionnaires, the preparation of consultations with experts, the organization of relevant thematic hearings and working visits, the drafting of press releases, and the use of other mechanisms. In terms of individual cases, the rapporteurships, in turn, continue to participate in and contribute to, on the basis of their specializations, the processing of individual petitions on human rights violations received by the IACHR. They also participate actively in reviewing applications for precautionary measures and supporting hearings and friendly settlements.

- 9. The IACHR's thematic rapporteurships make sustained efforts to work in a coordinated and strategic fashion, taking into consideration the intersection of identities and risks that can intensify human rights violations against various persons, groups, and collectivities in the Hemisphere. In that respect, the rapporteurships, over the years, have identified issues for joint collaboration and exchanges, such as, for example, indigenous women and girls, and migrants deprived of liberty, among others.
- 10. As a result of the above, with regard to observation, promotion, and training activities and the thematic work of the thematic rapporteurships, the present chapter is broken down into three sections: A. Observation activities conducted by the IACHR on the basis of on-site and working visits by both country rapporteurships and thematic rapporteurships; B. Promotion and training activities; C. Activities of thematic rapporteurships and units.

A. IACHR Observation Activities in 2019

11. As indicted above with regard to the observation, promotion, training, and thematic work activities of the thematic rapporteurships, the present chapter is divided into three sections: 1. IACHR observation activities on the basis of on-site and working visits by both the country rapporteurships and the thematic rapporteurships; 2. Promotion and training activities; and 3. Activities of thematic rapporteurships and units.

B. IACHR's Training and Promotion Activities

59. The Inter-American Commission has the mandate to promote human rights in the region, in line with the Organization's Charter, as well as its Statute and Rules of Procedure. In that respect, it raises public awareness about human rights in the Americas and makes recommendations to OAS member states to adopt measures that contribute to their protection.

- 60. In that framework, the IACHR steers promotion and training activities on its working mechanisms and on inter-American human rights standards that have developed through the inter-American human rights system's doctrine and case law. This is aimed at promoting greater appreciation and understanding in civil society, social networks, and member states about its scope and, where relevant, for their application and incorporation, using a human rights approach, in decisions, regulatory frameworks, and public policies.
- 61. In its Strategic Plan for 2017-2021, the IACHR established strategic objective 3 (SO3) focusing on building a structured strategy that would make it possible to strengthen the IACHR's promotion and training actions as one of the pillars of its institutional work. In that framework, the IACHR decided to develop a "comprehensive program for wide-ranging promotion and training in the inter-American system," which includes awareness-raising campaigns and prevention; inter-American human rights conferences; seminars and events; activities for disseminating reports; advocacy measures in human rights education; training course on public policies in human rights and on the inter-American system and inter-American standards; thematic courses; and support for national and regional competencies in the inter-American system.
- 62. Throughout 2019, promotion and training activities on the IAHRS in the Hemisphere were strengthened, with a total of 322 activities carried out, broken down into 68 training events and 254 promotion activities. It must be indicated that about 6,254 persons participated in this total of 320 activities, of whom 3,052 were women. In the promotion activities, there was a total of about 3,673 participants, of whom 1,640 were women. Furthermore, the IACHR has trained about 2,581 persons, of whom 1,412 were women. There were 24 states where these activities were conducted, among which Argentina, Barbados, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Jamaica, Mexico, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Trinidad and Tobago, United States, and Uruguay and Venezuela.

1. Training activities

63. Training activities are aimed at developing and building capacities through training activities on the various working mechanisms of the IACHR, inter-American standards, institutional capacity building and public policymaking with a human rights approach of the states. They also strive to develop the capacities of social and academic organizations and networks to act in defense of human rights, as well as the capacity building of state agents in the area. In the framework of the 66 training activities conducted as a whole in 2019, the following training activities must be highlighted as a priority:

1.1 IACHR/IPPCH International course on public policies for human rights

- 64. In 2019, the Fourth Edition of the International Course on Public Policies for Human Rights and the Second Edition organized and held jointly by the IACHR and the MERCOSUR Institute of Public Policies for Human Rights (IPPDH) took place.
- 65. The course is aimed at training relevant stakeholders of the region on human rights in public policies and was addressed to civil servants in charge of designing, steering, implementing, and evaluating public policies, members of social organizations and movements, academics, and society as a whole. On the basis of a perspective recognizing the progress and challenges in the region, it provided an approach to the experiences and challenges that the implementation of the human rights approach entails for state institutions. The study process offered by this international course combined theoretical and practical training in the field of international human rights law, the inter-American human rights protection system, social sciences, and public administration, with presentations of high-impact practical experiences for guaranteeing the rights implemented in the states of the region over the past few years.
- 66. This initiative is part of the implementation of the IACHR Strategic Plan for 2017-2021, which established a program to promote public policies aimed at strengthening respect for human rights as a key element for national capacity building to implement inter-American human rights standards.

- 67. It is a course with a blended learning model carried out in three stages. The first is online for 13 weeks via the online campus of the International School of the IPPDH. The second is mandatory and involves five days of classroom work at IPPDH headquarters in Buenos Aires. In addition there is an optional week for specializing in the inter-American system, which was conducted in the framework of IACHR's 173 regular session at IACHR headquarters.
- 68. In this training, 102 persons participated, of whom 50 were women. It was taught both by instructors from the IPPDH and by human rights specialists from the IAHCR. For the optional week of onsite training in Washington, D.C., 48 persons attended.

1.2. Courses on the strategic use of the IAHRS for human rights defenders

- 69. In the framework of activities for human rights capacity building in the region, there was the Course for Human Rights Defenders on the strategic use of the inter-American system. An open invitation was launched, which led to 3,953 applications from persons interested in taking the course, from which 60 were chosen, and 7 scholarships were granted to those persons coming from countries about which the IACHR receives information repeatedly on patterns of threats, harassment, violent attacks, and killings: Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Colombia, Mexico, and Brazil. The course was provided in two stages between July and September 2019.
- 70. The first stage consisted of holding a training workshop at the Pontifical Catholic University of Peru in Lima on July 1 to 5, 2019. The goals of this stage were to build up the capacities of human rights defenders and provide them with conceptual and methodological tools making it possible to replicate, in their communities and organizations, the knowledge gained.
- 71. The working methodology during the classroom week consisted of developing theoretical and practical activities taught by the experts of the Executive Secretariat of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, who presented the standards, tools, and mechanisms of the inter-American system, and practical cases were worked on to facilitate the process of learning how to use them strategically.
- 72. There were 60 persons attending the classroom week, from 17 different countries of the region (Venezuela, Colombia, Argentina, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Brazil, Bolivia, Paraguay, Mexico, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala, Puerto Rico, Trinidad and Tobago, and Dominican Republic). Of these participants, 30 identified themselves as women, 18 as men, and 1 as non-binary gender. In addition, when they were queried about the group they belonged to, 17 identified themselves as "indigenous persons," 8 as "Afrodescendants," and 4 as "LGBTI persons," whereas 27 referred to the category "Other" and 4 chose not to answer the question.
- 73. The course's second stage consisted of having the participants conduct replications in their own organizations and/or communities. As a result of this stage, 602 persons were trained in the following countries: Dominican Republic, Brazil, Bolivia, Peru, El Salvador, Argentina, Colombia, Venezuela, Mexico, Nicaragua, Guatemala, Ecuador, Trinidad and Tobago, and Chile.
- 74. On December 9 to 13, at IACHR headquarters in Washington, D.C., the second edition of the course was held, with 60 participants, of whom 35 were women and, once again, 7 scholarships were granted to those persons coming from countries about which the IACHR repeatedly receives information on patterns of threat, harassment, violent attacks, and killings: Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Colombia, Mexico, and Brazil.
