Background and Context:

The environment and natural resources do not recognize borders. International, hemispheric, and bilateral cooperation in environmental matters is thus paramount for addressing such cross-border issues as climate change, biodiversity loss, and the contamination of water. In this context, German Vera Esquivel’s work, Introducción al Derecho Internacional del Medio Ambiente (Introduction to International Environmental Law) is pertinent, useful and necessary. The book offers an overview of International Environmental Law, touching on its history, conceptual framework, main stakeholders, and current issues that must be addressed. This book is an important reference for obtaining an understanding of the foundations and effective application of International Environmental Law as well as its theoretical evolution in Latin America.

Germán Vera Esquivel is a Peruvian diplomat currently serving as Minister-Counselor in the Government of Peru. He has represented Peru both in Washington, D.C. and in The Hague. Mr. Vera Esquivel has a Bachelor’s degree in International Relations from the Diplomatic Academy of Peru, and a Law degree from the Catholic University of Peru. He also holds a Master’s in International Politics from the Free University of Brussels, and a Master’s in International Law from the University of Hull.
