PUBLICATION DATE: JANUARY 2003

Honduras reports that it carried out a physical inventory and a diagnostic of the situation of the Honduran Drugs Observatory (OHSD). As a result of this, it drew up and adopted a document containing the action guidelines to be followed, implementation of which began in July 2003.

With regard to the SIDUC System, in October 2003 the Honduran Observatory on Drugs held a first trial of application, input and analysis of the survey for high school students on a sample of 52 students from all over the country. This pilot test should be a help for the implementation and presentation of SIDUC in 2004.

The country reported that in December 2003 it fulfilled the goal of standardizing a database for the CICDAT System of CICAD, rehiring all its technical consultant team, updating and completing the questionnaires digitally.

Furthermore, it is estimated that, by June 2004, the Honduran Observatory on Drugs will have integrated the institutions that do not yet belong to the Observatory but whose information is essential for its database.

The country indicates that it needs technical and financial assistance, and help with equipment and training. The OHSD has received, through CICAD, assistance from Spain's National Drugs Plan.

RECOMMENDATION 7:

EXPAND COVERAGE OF THE NATIONAL SYSTEM OF PREVENTION PROGRAMS THAT TARGETS KEY SECTORS OF THE POPULATION.

Moreover, the Institute has established a help phone line to perform crisis interventions and detection in order to direct patients to treatment centers; it has also developed an internet forum to discuss the subject of use and abuse of drugs.

In 2003, the Community Police Division trained 11,252 persons on the subject of “maras” (youth gangs) and 18,343 persons on drugs, for a total of 29,595 persons. The training on drugs was more aimed at parents and students, and the training on the subject of gangs for teachers, community leaders, and the police.

Three projects of the “Sí Se Puede” (Yes we can) Program trained 9,909 children 7 – 12 years old, 7,082 youth 13 – 17 years old, and 5,453 adults 18 years or older, for a total of 22,444 persons. The plan is to train 8,051 more persons in 2004.

CONCLUSIONS

Honduras has fulfilled four of a total of fourteen recommendations that were assigned to it by the Second Evaluation Round, and has made progress in the fulfillment of five recommendations.

It has ratified the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and extended the typification of money laundering as a crime to include other serious crimes as predicates, as well as drug trafficking. Moreover, the country has improved its diversion prevention system for pharmaceutical product and controlled chemical substances.

However, no substantial progress has been seen for four recommendations relating to the ratification of other international instruments for the fight against crime, despite the fact that three of these were recommendations made during the First Evaluation Round and were reiterated in the Second Round.

Neither was there substantial progress in the reiterated recommendation of establishing mechanisms to evaluate drug abuse prevention and treatment programs.

CICAD acknowledges the efforts made by Honduras, which reflect its commitment to the MEM process, but states its concern for the lack of action regarding the recommendations made in the First Evaluation Round and reiterated in the Second Round.
