

To promote efforts to combat crime, the United States is a party to bilateral extradition treaties with countries throughout this Hemisphere. The extradition treaties to which the United States is a party and considers in force are identified below under the topic entitled “Bilateral Treaties.” Relevant legislation is identified below under the topic entitled “Legislation.”